8 Dead, 41 Injured In Train Wreck

Shocking Action By Jewish Terrorists

Jerusalem, Apr. 22.

The death toll in the latest Jewish terrorist outrage—the wrecking of a Cairo-Haifa trooptrain—is now established at eight, including five British soldiers, while 41 persons were injured, six of them seriously.

The train was blasted off the rails with a powerful mine placed on the track southeast of Rehovoth, in southern Palestine, early today by Jewish terrorists.

This outrage is the worst since the suitcase bomb exploded in the Goldschmidt Officers' Club in Jerusalem in March, killing 16 people.

Unofficial estimates from police officers who have been working day-long with troops to extricate survivors from the telescoped carriages, say there are probably thirty more people suffering from shock, cuts and bruises.

Police dogs have been brought in to take up the trail leading through the orange groves near the wrecked train, but have failed to find any trace of the attackers.

Troops and Army doctors were still at work this evening trying to extricate victims from the wreckage. They state that of the injured 23 are Servicemen and 18 are civilians. Two Servicemen and seven civilians are in a serious condition.

CHILD VICTIM

Most of the injured have been taken to hospital.

A three-year-old child was among the victims.

Meanwhile, the Jewish Stern Group terrorist organisation, in posters plastered all over Tel-Aviv, the all-Jewish city, claimed responsibility for planting the bomb in the British Colonial Office in London on April 16.

The bomb was found by a cleaner before it could explode.

By special dispensation of the Chief Rabbi, Isaac Herzog, the two Jewish terrorists (Meir Feinstein and Moshe Barzani) who committed suicide in the death cell at Jerusalem Central Prison were given full Jewish religious rites when they were buried today alongside the Jewish victims of Arab disturbances on the Mount of Olives.

Normally, suicides may not be buried in consecrated ground. The two men, who detonated explosives against their hearts, were to have been hanged at dawn today.

Another Jewish youth, alleged to be a terrorist, was captured tonight in the part of Jerusalem under curfew when attempting a get-away after throwing a hand-grenade at a police patrol car. There were no casualties.—Reuter.

DEMONSTRATION

Munich, Apr. 22.

More than 1,000 Jews from the small city of Regensburg near here today staged a public demonstration protesting the Gruner execution in Palestine last week.

The crowd gathered in front of the synagogue in Regensburg's city square, with banners saying "We want free entry to Palestine" and "Long Live President Truman". A written declaration of protest was to be forwarded to the British Consulate at Munich.—United Press.

EDITORIAL

From DMS to Governor

THE elevation of Dr Selwyn-Clarke from Director of Medical Services, Hongkong, to the Governorship of the Seychelles is a higher tribute to his qualities than any written essay can achieve. But our congratulations have no less meaning. Dr Selwyn-Clarke leaves behind him an almost unique record of selfless devotion to the interests of his fellowmen—especially the Chinese. It would be idle to suggest that in the carrying out of his duties, as he viewed them, the DMS has pleased everyone. In persistently endeavouring to demonstrate the formula that a healthy community is a vital asset, he has tackled his job with a vigour that has both shocked and affronted more susceptible people. To him, precedent has meant something only if it has positive values and can realise a desirable end. Otherwise, precedent is there to be ignored, or red tape exists to be slashed with surgical scissors. Sound schooling in the Gold Coast, and later Hongkong, fashioned Dr Selwyn-Clarke's administrative talents. But it was left to a war to highlight his practicable abilities. His story of Hongkong's occupation by the Japanese is one of a bitter, unrelenting personal battle against inhuman men on behalf of a distressed community. He saved himself, and drove others with ruthless vigour and exhortations to be faithful to the oath of Hippocrates. As a result, many who suffered were saved; and others were saved from pain. To the Seychelles, Dr Selwyn-Clarke takes not only Hongkong's good wishes for a continued career of achievement, but a variety of personal talents which are certain to be used to the benefit of the islands. He is a forceful administrator, a skillful doctor, an expert on tropical diseases and a fully qualified lawyer. A testimonial which requires no embroidery.

ENGLAND FACES DANGER

OF EXTENDED ELECTRICITY RATIONING

London, Apr. 22.

The British people who have not yet forgotten the hardships of the recent cold spell, in which drastic electricity cuts were imposed, received another jolt today when the Central Electricity Board, which controls the country's output, issued a grim warning.

It stated that unless many factories go over to shift work to balance the demands, or a scheme for increasing output at the peak periods by the use of aircraft engines is introduced, the country will have larger and longer cuts in electricity in the next three years.

This in turn would cause industrial dislocation. The Board hoped to have gas turbine engines operating in the near future and is also watching the development of atomic energy for generation of electricity.

For the long-term programme the Board has arranged for 16 new power stations by the winter of 1950, which will give almost six million kilowatts more output than that available at present.

The Board has told the Government of its anxiety about decreasing coal stocks, which were down to two weeks' consumption in May, 1946. In 1946 increased demand exceeded the capacity of the generating plants.

The Board considers that the uncertainties of national conversion to peacetime footing make it difficult to estimate the time required to establish a balance between generation and demand, even if no obstacles are placed in the way of construction several years must pass before the position is put right.

JET TURBINES

The Central Electricity Board plans to use jet turbines adapted from aircraft designs to boost output when peak consumption threatens to overload the inadequate generating plant, the Board's 19th annual report said today.

"These developments," it said, "hold promise of an important contribution to the problem of providing efficient economical and flexible plants to deal with the short-peak peak loads which occur on the public electricity supply systems." Jet generators which it is hoped to install shortly have a capacity of 15,000 kilowatts. Until 18 new power stations are built—they are planned for 1950—more and bigger electricity cuts will be a regular feature in Britain's industrial life, unless the demand can be spread more evenly over the day and night, the report declared.

The report advocated a substantial increase of night work in industry or morning and afternoon shifts, which is among the plans the Government have been considering for some months without finally producing any national policy.—Reuter.

Rebel Manifesto May Cause Political Sensation

London, Apr. 22.

A political sensation is likely to be caused on the eve of the Labour Party National Conference beginning on May 23 by publication of an "immediate remedy for the economic crisis" manifesto by a group of left-wing Labour Members of Parliament, headed by "rebel" leader, Mr R. H. S. Crossman and former Fleet Street editor, Mr Michael Foot.

Mr Crossman, who was leader of the original revolt of the section of the Labour Party against certain aspects of Mr Ernest Bevin's foreign policy, voted with the Labour Government and against the new band of rebels on Concorption. In the present piece of what is described as "constructive criticism" he is understood to be joined by at least 15 Labour Members.

The manifesto is expected to be published by the end of next week.

A Flood Picture That Will Make You Shudder

THE CHURCHES DISCUSS RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Oxford, Apr. 22.

A strong attack on the Roman Catholic Church was made at a conference of evangelical churchmen here today by the Reverend A. T. Houghton, General-Secretary of the British Bible Church Missionary Society.

Reviewing the movements towards a union among churches overseas, Rev. Houghton expressed surprise that some people hoped that the Church of Rome, "this corrupt Church which arrogates to itself the title of Catholic," would be included in the reunion of Christendom.

"Those who have first-hand knowledge of the church overseas know that in every land the Church of Rome is a perpetual menace to religious liberty, simplicity of faith, purity of doctrine and practical Christian living."

"It is well to realise that it is a church dominated by political intrigue, with an insatiable thirst for material power. In my opinion, it would be well for evangelists to recognise that the Church of Rome will not unite with the Protestant denominations and to be equally determined on their part not to make any approaches to the Church which has so manifestly departed from scriptural teaching and practice."—Reuter.

MESSAGE OF GUIDANCE

London, Apr. 22.

The growing international tension and acute hardships from which the British people is suffering as a result of the war, "impel us to give to the clergy and faithful a message of guidance," says a statement issued by the Roman Catholic Hierarchy of England and Wales.

The statement continued: "We make an energetic protest against religious, racial and political persecution, which is tolerated and even encouraged by leaders of certain nations."

"The root cause of rivalry and discontent is the lack of charity."

Political convictions and patriotism are not strong enough to form the foundations of peace and justice.

"The law of God and mutual love of members of the human family are alone capable of restoring the broken trust between nations."

"We are gravely disturbed at the continued detention of German prisoners of war in Britain and we urge the government to take further measures for their immediate return home."—Reuter.

BISHOP'S PLEA

London, Apr. 22.

A plea for religious freedom, first for which man struggled, is today still the most urgent to be put up, the Dean of Winchester told the spring meeting of the British Council of Churches, which opened in London today.

"Merely to allow religious worship is not what we mean by religious freedom and that is where the struggle is going to take place," he said. It was essential to religious freedom that religious bodies should own property.

"The Bishop of Worcester declared: 'There is less religious freedom in the secular state of Turkey today than there was under the old Ottoman rule, although that does not say very much.' In Egypt, the Government were seeking to pass laws that might exterminate missionary work altogether. The orthodox Church in the Near East was between the mill-stones of Russian Communism and Islam, and between those two great forces the witness of the Christian Church is virtually being sterilised."

Canon Guy Rogers of Birmingham, asking if the Council's Executive Committee's report was entirely frank, said: "The trouble is not necessarily identified with the Socialist state. It is as old as the hills. If we were perfectly honest we should have to admit that the greatest sinners in the matter were the representatives of the Christian religion."

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr G. F. Fisher, summing up, said that it had never occurred to him as it had to one speaker that the plea for religious freedom was an attack on Russia.

"Russia is not the only, and I should be inclined to say not the greatest, danger in this particular field of threats to religious liberty," he declared.—Reuter.

Hon. Degree For Princess

Capetown, Apr. 22.

Princess Elizabeth today accepted the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of Cape Town.

Prime Minister Jan Christian Smuts, welcoming her to the University, said that the royal visit is of far-reaching significance.—Associated Press.

Here is an aerial picture that dramatically and vividly illustrates the extent of the flooding now being suffered in many parts of England. Note the flood waters are nearly roof high and that the farmyard in centre of picture is deeply awash. This photograph was taken over Hadendham, Buckinghamshire, and was flown to Hongkong this week.

Sitting on the Fence

by NATHANIEL GUBBINS

WHEN the power was cut off and the electric heater went dead N. Gubbins, Esq., grabbed a pencil, a few sheets of paper and a tea tray and leaped back into bed.

Whenever he writes in bed he always uses the back of a tea tray, which is better for the purpose than anything you will get when the export drive is off.

Then he gathered cigarettes and newspapers round him, and he first thing he saw after reading about the Test match was the suggestion that Dr Joad may be reincarnated as a woman.

So he didn't have to read any more. Here was a column handed to him on a plate, as you might say.

If N. Gubbins, Esq., is reincarnated as a female what sort of girl do you think he will be in, say, 1997? According to his present form, he may be a rather plain girl given to introspection and worrying, and devoted to daddies because no other man is devoted to him. Or, rather, her.

Or he may be a clever girl who passes all exams but is by-passed by love.

What he thinks he would like to be is a glamorous blonde, the destroyer of eligible young men of good families and the despair of elderly, misunderstood club men.

In other words, wolf bait.

Plain girl

LET'S see what happens to N. Gubbins, Esq., reincarnated as a plain girl. Ivy Smith (ex-Gubbins) is sitting in the little parlour opposite her father, who is a widower. Ivy is thinking of Ronnie, the handsome young income-tax collector, who lives next door.

Ivy is always thinking of Ronnie. She peeps behind the curtain to see him stride off in the morning to his office, where he will compose party letters to defaulting taxpayers.

She listens for his step in the evening and the firm, determined shutting of his gate. The walls of the semi-detached villa are thin, and she can hear his deep voice growling at his mother, who is a widow.

She can even hear his rumbling "Good-night, mum," and his firm, happy footstep going upstairs to bed, to the room that is only separated from hers by a nine-inch wall.

She remembers now she changed her bedroom so that she could be closer to him, lying there in the darkness of the night wondering if his socks are properly mended, if his mother can cook, if he is cold, if he likes hot bottles in his bed, if he is lonely, if he has her sense of humour, and, oh, all sorts of tender, girlish things.

She doesn't have to wonder if he loves her. She knows he doesn't. She has seen his cold, official eye stare straight through her pitiful little hints worn to charm him, or glare with distaste at the clownish make-up on her clownish face.

This particular night she has heard Ronnie's mother clear away the supper (she could almost hear him eating it) and she knows he will soon be going to bed. So she must go, too. This is the only thrill of the day in her monotonous life.

"Will you have your hot milk now, father?" she asks.

Her father, a silly old man, looks up from the crossword puzzle he has failed to solve all the evening.

"My dear, what have I done?" asks the old fool. "What have I said to upset my darling Ivy?"

"If you had to give me a silly name like Ivy you might at least call me Ivy and not Ivy."

"Too much, too much," screams the ex-Gubbins, flouncing out of the room and banging the door.

Clever girl

NORMA, ex-Gubbins No. 2, is so clever that even her parents recoil from her.

At school and college it is always the same, "First prize to Norma. Norma gets first prize. Norma passes with honours. We are proud of Norma."

They may be proud of her, but they hate her. She is not plain and shy like ex-Gubbins No. 1. She is ugly with the ugliness of pride and arrogance.

She can be a lawyer or doctor, a magistrate or a high-up in the Civil Service—anything she likes. She has passed all the exams.

But all this hideous, objectionable girl wants is a husband and a home of her own. Her weary parents are in favour of it, too.

It is hard for Norma to find a husband. It is hard for her to find a man who will say "Happy Christmas" to her and mean it.

She nearly lands one little fish, a middle-aged bachelor, who is happy till she dangles the bait. He escapes by emigration.

Then, one day, on holiday in the country, she finds some simple, sweating hind in the fields and drags him, muttering, to the altar.

He has no brains. She has enough for both. She will develop his mind. She takes him through mathematics, makes him read good books, listens to good music. He can sing better songs in The Wagon and Horses but she won't let him.

He loses weight and is given to cursing under his breath. Everybody says he's fair mazed and properly, plicated.

Therefore, nobody is surprised when ex-Gubbins No. 2 is found strangled beside the radio with the Third Programme blaring.

Yes, the Third Programme is still going in 1997.

Glamour girl

EX-GUBBINS No. 3 is blonde and lovely. Hearts miss a beat when she smiles. Her wit is quoted all over town and stolen by the radio comedians.

Wolf packs gather round her wherever she is, begging for favours and snarling at each other.

As she is as good as she is beautiful, which is usually the case, she is not quite happy about the wolves.

The background noises of her life are the yelping of young wolves licking their wounds and the howling of old wolves, mortally hurt and creeping away to die in club arm-chairs.

But what is she to do? If she ignores them they are hurt. If she smiles at them they are hurt, because she smiles at all.

Being a kind-hearted girl, she allows them to take her to dinner in turn, listening sympathetically to the outpourings of their hearts and drinking them under the table.

"You are all I ever wanted in life," the grizzled old wolves whisper in their cups. They all say this. She is used to it.

"If only I were younger," they say. As if that would make any difference.

But she only laughs beautifully, finishes off the champagne daintily and goes home in a separate cab. She is untouched by emotion all the Awful Young Men comes along. He is so awful that men turn away from him when introduced. When he enters a good hotel porters run after him to ask him what he wants, and usually turn him out to be on the safe side.

He wears purple striped suits and suede shoes and goes in for football pools. (Yes, they still have football pools.)

He borrows all her money, pawns her jewels, insults her when drunk and mocks her when sober.

He goes to prison for embezzlement she still loves him, but marries a hearty industrialist, who thinks puns are funny, and has three ugly children, all like the hearty industrialist.

If N. Gubbins, Esq., is born again as a female he thinks he would like to be a black woman in the real jungle, where tigers are the chief danger, or a girl in Lapland, where wolves have four legs and clean minds.

BY THE WAY by Beachcomber

THE night was moonless, and there was a thick white mist. At about 2 a.m. Colonel Craddock-Mildew started to walk home from an evening of bridge.

He was feeling his way slowly along the promenade when he heard voices on the beach to his right. Someone said: "Here is dry land. We must have landed on the very edge of a canal." Or "said someone else, "an ancient crater filled with water."

Fuzzled by the darkness and mist, presently a dim figure was visible, which at once halted him. The Colonel made no reply. The figure grew more distinct. An old man in a tiny felt hat, and with a sweeping beard, approached cautiously. "The Colonel grew equally cautious. "I know not," said the old man, "in what tongue to address you."

"Damn it, sir!" said the Colonel, "Isn't English good enough?"

The hideous truth

"GOOD heavens!" said the old man. "Do the moon-folk speak English?"

"The what folk?" thundered the Colonel.

"This is incredible," said the old man. "Surely nobody has anticipated us. Surely we are the first."

Rupert & the New Pal—36

When George is comfortably settled in the hamper Rupert and Bill decide that it is too soon to go home and that they may as well go on looking for buttercups, as those seem to be the tortoise's favourite food. In another meadow they spy their friend Old Willum, and they trot across to him. "Please, can you tell us where to find buttercups?" they ask. The old man is hard of hearing, but he appears to understand. "Buttercups?" he wheezes. "Ay—in the second field beyond that gate."

"Now isn't that strange, girls?—three pairs left."

"No brandy—we're experimenting with lighter fuel."

"I thought it was Australia we were playing."

"No doubt Mr. Shinwell will refund your money application."

"No," said the Colonel gently, as though humouring a child or a lunatic. "No. Worthing."

Here's a quick "renewal" plant

RENEW YOURSELF!

Don't say, "I'm too tired, I'll go just as I am!" That's the easy way but it's all wrong! Twenty minutes spent in freshening up will put you "in the mood" for fun and relaxation. First of all, you owe it to yourself to look your best. To look your best gives you confidence in yourself! This confidence results in greater. Polite and more charm of manner!

If you are physically tired or just mentally "low," it always "picks you up" to take a relaxing hot bath, do a new hairdo, put on a new makeup. And, most blessed of all, to wear a new hat! Every woman knows the "lift" that she gets when she buys something new, gay and feminine, something which she doesn't really NEED, but WANTS!

When you decide upon that twenty minutes to eliminate that "tired feeling," follow a plan for speed. First remove your old makeup. Now put on some rich nourishing cream. The cream will melt on your skin, doing a good job of lubrication. Slide into your tub, crawl in or fall in—but in you go! Soap your body, then—just sit. A handful of bath salts or a dash of fragrant bath oil makes your soaking more luxurious.

When you feel clean, from the tips of your toes to the top of your head, get out of the tub and rub your body briskly with a Turkish towel. Now you are ready for the cooling off, a grand after-bath splashing with cologne. This cools and gives your skin a pleasant tingling feeling. And don't forget to put your face with skin freshener. If you pour it over ice cubes you'll feel as cool and crisp as ice-box lettuce!

Now is the time to smooth on your foundation cream. Stroke and blend it carefully. A touch of rouge, your face powder, then do your eyes. The last gesture is Accent on your lips. Let down your hair, comb quickly and arrange. A big whoosh of body powder, then into your clothes. Look into your mirror. No, that's not a new woman, just a renewed one!

Dry skin calls for a two-point program—softening and stimulation. Softening takes a rich, dry-skin cream of the homogenized type. Apply from the chin to the hairline. Allow the cream to remain on while you exercise the facial muscles. Grinace, puff out your cheeks, exercising all of the facial muscles. After five minutes, remove the cream or, if it is time for bed, leave on a thin film overnight. And use the same kind of cream on your hands.

HER GIRLS ARE YOUNG FOR EVER

It is forty years since Angela Brazil wrote "The Fortunes of Phillippa"—forerunner of 49 novels of schoolgirl life.

At 11 she had already begun writing stories; soon after leaving school she had a play published, and then began the novels that held a generation of schoolgirls spellbound.

Remember them? "For the Sale of the School"; "Three Terms at Uplands"; "Montress Merle"; "The School on the Loch" and the others....

She wrote many of them at her cottage, "The Haven," in Polperro, Cornwall—tucked away at the end of a tangled, uphill path above the fishing village.

Her other home was with her brother at 1, The Quadrant, Coventry. It was there that Angela Brazil—creator of the eternal schoolgirl—died recently. Her last school tale was completed last October. She was 78.

Battle Against Hunger May Extend Beyond 1948

BY PAUL HARRISON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Millions of people in Europe and Asia will, perhaps, struggle through the next few months in the hope that the new year of harvests, beginning in June, will bring some improvement in their food supply.

But the fact is inescapable, according to Washington experts, that the battle against hunger must go on through 1947, into 1948 and even beyond that for some.

HIGHLAND NEWSLETTER

(By a Special Correspondent)

A practical scheme for the alleviation of the acute housing shortage in Inverness is being discussed, but its success depends on the co-operation of the tenants of Council houses. So far that co-operation has not been forthcoming to any great extent. The situation is that many three, four and five room Council houses are under-occupied, while many of the smaller houses are overcrowded. Members of families occupying the larger houses leave home to get married or to take jobs elsewhere or for other reasons, leaving, perhaps, only the parents in a house intended for five or six occupants.

The Council are inviting tenants in this position to change houses so that the tenants of overcrowded houses may have more room and the couples or smaller families may have a smaller house more suited to their needs, and at a considerably cheaper rent.

Alternatively the Council suggest that tenants who have rooms in spare should take in sub-tenants. They feel that it is unfair, for example, that a single woman should occupy a three or four apartment house while families of five and six have to be content with two rooms.

At present there are 402 under-occupied houses in the town. The Council sent out letters to the owners of these houses inviting them to make an exchange, or to help the housing situation by taking in sub-tenants, but so far they have only had sixteen replies. Eight tenants agreed to the proposal and the other eight were undecided.

Sunday Golf

It would seem that Inverness Town Council are wasting time discussing whether or not Sunday golf should be allowed on the Culachob Club course. This is a private club and it is for the members to decide whether play should be allowed on Sunday or not. But the matter is causing a good deal of feeling among the members themselves.

At present members of this club who wish to play on Sunday have to go to Forres, Elgin or Tain, and while those who are car owners can manage this easily enough the others must travel by bus, which is not so convenient. There is also the question of the additional cost involved. Another matter is that the club favours Sunday play is that summer visitors to the Highland capital will wish to play golf, and they will expect to be allowed to play on Sundays. People from the South and from abroad will be accustomed to playing on Sundays.

On the other hand there is a strong feeling in the Highlands against Sunday recreation, and this has influenced a good many of the members. But the general verdict is that Sunday golf ought to be permitted and that those who do not wish to play on that day are under no obligation to do so.

Highland Rotten Row

For some time past there have been tentative proposals to establish a riding school at the Bught Park, Inverness, with a tree-lined track round this extensive area which would be a sort of Highland Rotten Row. A definite move in this direction has now been made, and a Nairn man has applied to the Town Council for permission to start this enterprise. It is likely that the application will be granted.

Bught Park is in great demand these days. It is to house Bertram Mills Circus, which is paying a visit to the town for the first time since 1938, and the North of Scotland Amateur Athletic Association have proposed to hold a sports meeting at this venue this summer.

Other events to be held at the Bught during the summer are the Northern Meeting Games, a carnival and sheep dog trials.

Favours Wearing Of Kilt

Major-General Douglas N. Wimberley, who commanded the 51st Highland Division during the war, favours the wearing of the kilt. At the annual dinner of the Inverness Gaelic Society, the other night he urged the Society to encourage the wearing of the kilt and the tartan.

He suspected that some people felt that while the kilt was all right for lairds it was not so suitable for others who were less fortunately endowed, except when they were having their teens. It is a fact that people who wear the kilt in some parts of the Highlands are liable to be mistaken for tourists from the South. General Wimberley considers that this is all wrong. His own grandfather, who did not own a kilt, wore the kilt 365 days in the year in the town of Inverness.

The General's advice seems to have been taken to heart by Mr. J. H. Rollinson, retiring Head Postmaster at Inverness. Asked what he would like as a gift Mr. Rollinson chose a

The months from now to June are crucial. They are the months when, in the northern hemisphere particularly, many national leaders are almost empty. About the best any man in a hungry land can expect in the period is that his daily fare will not be cut.

And after that? Well, after that, according to the men who study food problems, if there are no crop failures production of major food products may, in a general sense, exceed prewar production.

That would mean, they explain, that about one-half the people in the world will have daily rations close to the bare subsistence level, or no higher than 2,250 calories daily. Many experts consider that 2,000 calories is the minimum to sustain life. At any rate, the food available would mean a hunger level for that half of the world. It is said.

Of the other half, about one-third would have daily rations as high as 2,750 calories, which only slightly exceeds the 2,550 calories said by nutritional experts to be needed for good health. Many of them would not have the full amount of 2,750. The remaining two-thirds would eat well, that is about or in excess of 2,750 calories a day.

Threshold of Starvation

While it is difficult for many persons to realise that half the world could be hungry when food production is above the prewar level, the reasons given by the experts are simple.

Studies by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation show that before the war half the world's population lived literally on the threshold of starvation.

Great numbers of people in the Philippines, Korea, Java and parts of India and lesser numbers in Mexico, Colombia, Central America, Peru, Iran and Iraq are said by experts to have had diets averaging between 1,800 and 2,100 calories daily then. The most fortunate among them will get 95 percent of such amounts this year.

Living close to the health level with 2,400 to 2,750 calories a day were great numbers in Manchuria, French Morocco, Greece, Italy, Chile, Brazil, Palestine and Turkey, according to these experts.

Eating 2,700 to 3,000 calories were Rumania, Austria, Germany, Poland, Spain, Hungary, the USSR, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Belgium, Denmark, Cuba, Finland, Netherlands, Czechoslovakia, and Paraguay. Most of them will have less than 95 percent of that diet this year. Rumania, Austria and Germany—and perhaps some others—will have less than 80 percent.

Price Factor

There were various reasons for poor food consumption before the war. Price was, perhaps, the biggest factor. People could not afford to eat.

To a certain extent price is still a factor. But there are others—lack of farm machinery, lack of seed, lack of manpower, lack of fertilisers, lack of transportation and bad weather. These hold down production.

The lack of money, of transportation or efficient rationing systems, in some areas, hinder efficient distribution of what food supplies there are.

These difficulties must all be overcome to get back to prewar levels of food production. As the statistics show, that is not enough. Another problem is an increase in population since prewar days—estimated now at 7 percent in spite of the death toll from war and starvation.

For world peace, UNFAO experts believe, these badly underfed half of the world's people must get their diets up to a minimum of 2,570 calories per person per day.

To do this by 1960, the following increases in production must be made: cereals production must increase by 21 percent over prewar; roots and tubers by 27 percent; sugar by 12 percent; fats by 34 percent; pulses by 80 percent; fruits and vegetables by 163 percent; meat by 46 percent; milk by 100 percent.

kilt. But Mr. Rollinson is a York-shireman and his wife is a Norwegian, so the choice of an appropriate tartan was a matter of some difficulty. The problem was solved when it was learned that Mr. Rollinson's mother was Highland. So the kilt is now being made. At the official presentation Mr. Rollinson was presented with a sporran as a token gift.

Longest Moustache

Mr. Murdo Matheson, 74-year-old retired gamekeeper who lives in a cottage near Invergarry, has a moustache 20 inches long. In 1939 this was the longest moustache in Britain, but then it measured 24 inches. Mr. Matheson began the serious cultivation of this hair on his upper lip when he was married 52 years ago.

He served in the Black Watch during the 1914-18 war but, knowing Sergeant Major James Macdonald, the moustache was trimmed somewhat during that period. In the recent cold spell the Caledonian Canal was frozen over but Mr. Matheson can remember when it was frozen so solidly in 1893 that carts were driven over it.

Fort William Town Council have now decided to start peat-cutting on a moor at Torlundy, a few miles from the town. This sounds like good news for the householders. The only snag is that this peat-burning fuel is to cost 2s. 6d. per bag.

PENICILLIN CLOTS BLOOD QUICKLY

The blood-clotting action of for some patients, has been reported in the magazine Science by David I. Macht, of the Mt Sinai Hospital, Baltimore.

He finds that penicillin causes blood to clot more quickly than usual. He cites an Italian medical report in which four persons who took penicillin suffered from embolism, blood clots in the veins. Mr. Macht says also that due to the body's natural defences against embolism, such accidents from penicillin are extremely rare.

A new drug that heals ulcers due to tuberculosis was reported by Ethan Allan Brown, of Tufts Medical School, and L. W. Slanetz, of the University of New Hampshire Biology Department. The drug is known as glycerite of hydrogen peroxide.

In the Essex County Tuberculosis Sanatorium, at Danvers, Massachusetts, Dr. Joseph Goldberg used this preparation as a dressing on four patients, says the report.

These abscesses appear in various parts of the body, and one patient had several in the chest, thighs and legs. None of the four had responded to previous treatment. In three cases the abscesses healed completely. The fourth patient's abscess is better.—Associated Press.

DOV GRUNER BURIED

Jerusalem, Apr. 21.

The ancient city of Safad in Northern Palestine looked like a battlefield last Wednesday, during the burial services for Dov Gruner and three other Jewish extremists, eye-witnesses revealed today.

British troops cordoned off the foothills to Mount Canaan and guarded every one of the 2,000 Jewish houses in the city.

The bodies were brought to the burial site in a police truck, escorted by Bren gun carriers and armoured cars. A previous check had been made of every male resident of Safad. The curfew was lifted only when several hundred Jews gathered for the funeral.

Gruner, dressed in an undershirt, was barefoot. The other three were dressed in red prisoners' pants. All the bodies were covered with white sheets spotted with fresh blood stains.

The burial took about 15 minutes, with a single eulogy by Rabbi J. Silbermann.

Safad's Jewish colony apparently feared to attend the ceremony, which was watched closely by British intelligence agents. Many Jews, however, looked out of windows as the corpses passed by.

The burials took place in graves near the victims of the 1929 riots. Safad Cemetery also is the burial place of one of the 10 rabbis killed by a Roman king.—United Press.

Ledo Road In Good Shape

The London Times' Rangoon correspondent reports that, according to travellers just returned from Northwest Burma, the famous Ledo Road, despite lack of maintenance, is still in excellent condition and the journey from Myitkyna to the railroad in Assam can be completed by car comfortably in 12 hours.

The pipeline is being ripped up and sold in India. The Burma Road, from Lashio to Yunnan province, is now being brought up to prewar condition. There is some bus traffic with China, and recently some tin ore sold to America came out by lorry.

The policy to be adopted regarding these strategic roads linking Burma with China and India will be among questions requiring decisions by the Burmese Government after the elections, the correspondent adds. All are remarkable engineering achievements.

DROP IN U.S. PUBLIC CASH HOLDINGS

Money in the hands of the American public has dropped US$1,000,000,000 since Christmas.

Some Government analysts cite the cost of living as a probable cause. They say prices apparently were forcing many persons to dig into hoarded money to live. Much of the abnormal cash in circulation has been attributed to blackmarketing and tax evading. But officials believe sizable sums were legitimately accumulated by the people who do not put their money in banks or investments.

Both these things are in addition to the high level of business operations, which required businesses to keep greater amounts of cash on hand.

Public cash holdings in America jumped from US$11,000,000,000 three weeks after Pearl Harbor to a record of over US$29,000,000,000 last Christmas.

The amount has declined steadily since. At present it is approximately US$28,000,000,000.—Associated Press.

Family Parted 24 Years

A Scottish mother and her two daughters left by plane last week for New York to rejoin, for the first time in 24 years, the missing member of the family—Patrick McEviney, husband of the woman and father of the girls.

McEviney left his coal mining job in 1923 to find work in America, his 54-year-old wife said before boarding the plane, and through a series of circumstances has been unable until now to send for his family.

It will be the first time he has seen the younger daughter Catherine, 23, since he left Scotland five months before she was born.

Mrs. McEviney said her husband, a caretaker in the Empire State Building since 1932, had sent her £3 each week "and with every cheque came a long letter telling how he missed me and the children."—Associated Press.

Sale Of UNNRA Fishing Boats

American fishermen will be given the chance to purchase units of fishing boats built on Puget Sound as part of UNNRA China relief programme, UNNRA announced recently.

Bids for 10 combination sailers and druggers were to be received in Washington, D.C., on April 21.

The reason for offering the craft to American fishermen is UNNRA's desire to take emphasis off the capital equipment phase of aid to China and "place more emphasis on consumer supplies."

Money from the sale of the boats would be used for such items as food and cotton for China.—Associated Press.

Fraulein Takes No Chances

Airlino officials at Frankfurt, Germany, who arrange flights to the United States for Americans and their German brides and fiancées, said that one smart Fraulein was taking no chances of being left behind.

Two soldiers have been in constant correspondence with the airline officials. Both expect to take the same fraulein home, reports United Press.

French Wheat Stocks Nearly Gone; Cut In Bread Ration Likely

Paris, Apr. 22. Paris housewives queued up for bread today, and the Ministry of Food Supply admitted that wheat stocks were nearly gone. "We are living from day to day by virtue of importations which are extremely irregular," a Ministry official told the United Press.

TWO FRENCH DOCTORS FACE TRIAL

Paris, Apr. 22. Two French doctors have been brought to trial for allegedly using sea turtle serum to treat tuberculosis-stricken patients.

Doctors Jacques Boiffard and Jean Prestat are charged with selling and delivering serums without authorisation. They are alleged to have been using an anti-TB vaccine obtained from sea turtles to treat tuberculosis patients at the Marie of Rumania clinic in Paris.

Sitting calmly and with police in the courtroom yesterday, Drs Boiffard and Prestat heard a parade of witnesses, including doctors and hospital authorities, proclaim the marvellous healing powers of the turtle serum. There was no testimony given contradicting the evidence. However, medical sources in Paris said today that while the serum might be effective in treating temporary or minor TB, they doubted its efficacy in curing pulmonary tuberculosis.

Cures Claimed
Turtle serum was originally used in Germany in the 1920s, where it had the name of Friedmann Serum. After the doctor who developed it, Dr. Simonowicz, died, the rights to the serum were transferred to the Marie of Rumania clinic in Paris, which had government approval for its use.

The Ministry of Public Health never awarded the necessary accord, but Simonowicz and his pupils, the two doctors now on trial, continued to use the treatment, claiming a high percentage of cures.

Under the terms of a French law of 1934, no medical treatment can be used without prior official approval. This is the basis of the accusation against Boiffard and Prestat.

The case, which is being heard in the 17th Correctional Chamber, has been adjourned until the first week in May.—United Press.

TARIFF TALKS IN GENEVA

Geneva, Apr. 22. Tariff negotiations between Britain and the United States at the International Trade Conference here will open tomorrow when representatives of the two countries meet to exchange a list offering tariff concessions, it was announced today.

Tariff talks will also begin tomorrow between Canada and the United States, and Czechoslovakia and the United States.

Other negotiations starting this week will be between France and the United States and on Friday between France and South Africa, China and France and Canada and France.

Altogether there are 120 sets of tariff negotiations, of which have had their dates fixed. Twenty-four sets of negotiations will begin in April, 48 in the first half of May and 24 in the second half of May.

At a private meeting today, the Executive Committee of the International Trade Conference elected five vice-chairmen of the preparatory committee, including Mr. L. D. Vilgus, former Canadian Minister to the Soviet Union and now Minister to Switzerland.

New French Tariff
A statement was made at this session by the French delegation on the new French tariff, first referred to in the United States-France loan agreement in May 1946, when it was stated that tariff would form the basis of the French tariff reduction negotiations in Geneva.

The French then undertook that the new tariff—which is imposed on the value of each individual item instead of at a flat rate on all items within a category—would not increase tariffs above the prewar level.

Interested European circles, however, say that the new French tariff will raise French tariffs up to 50 percent above the prewar level.

Under the United States-French loan agreement, the French Government said that they would abandon the quota system for imports when a new tariff was introduced.—Reuter.

THE PARKERS

Jet Plane Sets New Speed Mark

London, Apr. 22. A Gloster Meteor IV jet propelled aircraft which arrived at Kastrup airport in Copenhagen yesterday from Brussels on a demonstration flight, attained a speed exceeding 14 miles per hour (22.4 kilometres) the world's speed record set up last September by Britain.

The plane flew the 800 kilometres from the Belgian capital at an average speed of 630 miles per hour (1,008 kilometres).

The plane is being demonstrated to the Scandinavian governments, but owing to the death of King Christian the demonstration in Denmark was postponed. The plane is due to leave for Norway and Sweden today.

The Gloster Aircraft Company states that the journey from Brussels to Copenhagen was an ordinary flight. The pilot of the Meteor IV is Squadron-Leader D. V. C. Coles-Freedy. He is one of the Gloster Aircraft Company's ace test pilots. He set out from Manton, Kent, on 6,400 kilometres demonstration tour.

The Meteor IV is identical with that which established the world record of 885.6 kilometres per hour, except that it has clipped wings, not standard in RAF Meteor fighters.—Reuter.

Test Pilot Killed

Gloucester, Apr. 22. James Bridge, 26, was killed today when the Meteor jet aircraft he was testing for the first time developed engine trouble and crashed near here.

Bridge apparently tried to land when he saw smoke pouring from one of the engines, but the plane stalled and crashed. Bridge was pinned beneath the wreckage and was dead when freed. The plane did not catch fire.—United Press.

Georgia Crash

Atlanta, Georgia, Apr. 22. Nine persons were killed today when a Delta Airlines aircraft crashed near Columbus, Georgia, after colliding with a converted Army trainer when landing.—Reuter.

Seagrave Trophy

London, Apr. 22. Mr. Geoffrey de Havilland, who lost his life last autumn in a high-speed test flight, has been awarded the Seagrave Trophy, it was announced today.

The trophy, instituted in 1930 to commemorate the achievements of the late Sir Henry Seagrave, has not been awarded during the war years. It is normally awarded every year to the British subject who, in the opinion of the awarding committee, accomplishes the most outstanding demonstration of possibilities of transport by land, air or water.—Reuter.

FRESH TEXAS CITY BLAZE

Texas City, Apr. 22. A warehouse stored with ammonium nitrate burst into flames today, a week after the disastrous explosions caused by the same chemical.

The warehouse is owned by the Texas City Terminal Railway Company. Heavy clouds of smoke again obscure the city, where 575 persons are estimated to have been killed last week.

The cause of today's fire is not yet determined. The streets were crowded with traffic at the time shops were open and the routine of life was gradually being restored.

Mayor J. C. Trahan said that the business section of the city was in no apparent danger from another explosion.

The fire is in what is left of the warehouse near the dock where the French ship Grand Camp blew up.

Mr. W. H. Sandberg, Vice-President of the Company, said: "I do not think there are more than 1,000 tons of ammonium nitrate in there. The French vessel Grand Camp was reported to have had 2,300 tons on board."

No flames are visible, but the warehouse is smoking heavily with a deep orange colour, which residents have learned to fear.

Officials promised to notify citizens by wireless if danger appeared imminent. Many citizens are reported to be packing in readiness to evacuate the city again, but according to the Houston Chronicle, the fire was extinguished shortly before 6 p.m.—Reuter.

4,000 Angry Romans In Protest March

Rome, Apr. 22. An angry crowd of 4,000 war veterans today marched through ranks of club-swinging police and tried for the second time in a week to storm the barred doors of Montecitorio Palace, where the Constituent Assembly was in session.

The march by former partisans, returned prisoners of war and discharged army veterans, including numerous wounded, was a protest against unemployment, inadequate government subsidies and rising prices.

The police tried rushing the crowd with jeeps but were under orders to proceed cautiously and pulled up before ramming any marchers.—United Press.

Russians Go All Out In Search For Minerals

Thousands of prospectors will blanket the Soviet Union by parachute, reindeer, camel, automobile, airplane and pack mule this year in the greatest mineral search in Russia's history, Radio Moscow reported today.

JEWES ON HUNGER STRIKE

Nicosia, Cyprus, Apr. 22. The hunger strike continues at the Cyprus camps, which have now been taken over by British troops, and special precautions have been taken to exclude the press and the public from the area.

At noon today the Xylotymbou camp was quiet and orderly, with the interned Jewish illegal immigrants holding a mass meeting. Banners displayed at the entrance to the camp bore the slogan "Fifteen Thousand Jewish Refugees Refuse Food" and "British Fired on Peaceful Demonstrations."

There were no signs of sick persons although many were sitting in attitudes of exhaustion, and it was stated there were bad cases in the huts.

Guards at the camp confirm that no ration was taken for the children by the camp and also that there has been no communication since Friday between the camp committee and the authorities.

From the medical angle tomorrow will be critical as the fifth day of abstention, and will undoubtedly produce serious physical effects. At any rate the strikers would be unable to take ordinary rations, and would require special feeding.

Rabbi's Protest

Meanwhile, Rabbi Heilpern, Cyprus representative of the Chief Rabbi's Council, has cabled a protest to the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Arthur Creech Jones, against the official Palestine evacuation of the Jewish refugees.

The Rabbi claimed that shooting was not justified, as the Palestine Information Office communiqué had said by attempts to break out of camp and denied an official statement that immigrants had asked for an increase in the monthly quota of entry permits for Palestine.

Reports from London indicate that the Cyprus camp question is evoking interest there. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Hugh Dalton, announced in the House of Commons today that the British taxpayer pays no part in the erecting and maintaining of the camps for illegal Jewish immigrants.

When asked whether the policy of imposing a heavy fine on such areas of Palestine in which terrorism took place had been considered, Mr. Dalton replied: "I think this is a larger question."—Reuter.

INVITATION TO VASILEVSKY

Moscow, Apr. 22. Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery has set some time in June as the time he would like to act as host to the Chief of Staff, Marshal Vasilevsky, of the United Press learned today, and the Soviet Marshal has replied that he will give his answer some time next month.

Field Marshal Montgomery invited Marshal Vasilevsky to visit England as his guest during his own trip to Russia in January.—United Press.

MOUNTBATTEN TO VISIT FRONTIER

New Delhi, Apr. 22. An official communiqué announced today that the Viceroy, Viscount Mountbatten, and Lady Mountbatten would visit the North-West Frontier next Monday for a one-day, quick tour to inspect the situation.

The communiqué said: Lord Mountbatten would make frequent tours outside Delhi. This will be his first since taking office.—United Press.

Chindit Head's Remains

London, Apr. 22. The body of Major-General O. C. Wingate, commander of the Chindits, recently found in Manipur, will not be brought to Britain for burial with military honours, stated the War Minister, Mr. Frederick Bellenger, in the House of Commons today.

Mr. Bellenger added that this was in accordance with the policy of the Government that the bodies of those who fell overseas should be concentrated within military cemeteries in the countries and zones in which they fell.—Reuter.

SOLDIER TO HANG FOR RAPE

Honolulu, Apr. 22. The Army announced that Pte. Garlon Mickle, 19, of St. Louis, will be hanged at Schofield Barracks today for raping a War Department civil employee in Guam a year ago.

President Truman approved the conviction last November. Mickle was a former member of the quartermaster truck company with the 20th Air Force.—United Press.

Hunt For Yugoslav Criminals

Rome, Apr. 22. British military police and Italian police are co-operating in a widespread hunt for 16 Yugoslav criminals freed last night by a band of 1,000 anti-Tito Yugoslavs which attacked the train taking the prisoners to the Lipari Islands, off Sicily.

The anti-Tito men were being taken northward from a British camp at Naples to the British zone of Germany. Their train, and a train carrying criminals southward, stopped at adjacent tracks, at the railway station of Formia, about 80 miles south of Rome.

When the anti-Tito men heard that the prison train contained fellow-countrymen, they attacked and overpowered the train guards, liberating 17 prisoners, one of whom was later recaptured.

Military police searched the northbound train when it arrived in Rome early today. The Slavs feigned sleep and adopted a policy of passive resistance.

The released men had been sentenced by Italian courts to terms of imprisonment for criminal offences. The 1,000 anti-Tito men formed part of a contingent of 12,000 Yugoslavs from the British camp at Eboli, near Naples, whose transfer to the British zone of Germany for further screening began on April 14.—Reuter.

LOSING FAITH IN GOVT?

London, Apr. 22. The Conservative Daily Express said today that its poll of public opinion showed that 58 per cent of the people were dissatisfied with the Labour Government's conduct of affairs.

Thirty-six per cent of those polled said they were satisfied with the Government and six per cent they "didn't know." Forty-one per cent were dissatisfied with Mr. Clement Attlee as Prime Minister, 42 per cent were satisfied and nine per cent "didn't know."

In the last previous poll in January, 42 per cent were satisfied with the Government and 50 per cent with Mr. Attlee.

The Express said the latest poll was completed early this month before publication of the new budget.

"This poll is not confined to Daily Express readers," the Express said. "It represents the views of a scientifically organised cross-section of the community of urban and rural men and women."—United Press.

Freddie Mills' Next Bout

London, Apr. 22. Promoter Jack Solomons announced today that the British light-heavyweight champion, Freddie Mills, will fight the American, Lloyd Marshall, in an outdoor bout here during the first week in June.

Solomons said he planned his first open air show for Derby Week. The Derby is scheduled for Saturday, June 7.

Solomons made the announcement before taking a plane for Stockholm with Nate Wolfson and Ray Arcel, manager and trainer of Joe Bakshi, and Joe Vella, manager of the world's light-heavyweight champion, Gus Lesnevich.—United Press.

NO FORCED LABOUR AS REPARATIONS

BY MILES W. VAUGHN
(United Press General Manager for Asia)

Tokyo, Apr. 23. General MacArthur will resist to the utmost any effort to make forced labour by Japanese prisoners of war part of reparations, and will continue his vigorous effort to get all Japanese prisoners of war back to this country at the earliest possible date, as provided in Clauses 9 and 10 of the Potsdam declaration.

More than 1,000,000 Japanese war prisoners were still held in Russian-controlled territories on April 15, when the last SCAP figures were released, and there was growing fear in Japanese circles that these men might be held indefinitely to work out Soviet reparations claims. Of these prisoners, 651,012 were in Siberia and 351,014 in the former Japanese islands of Saghalien (Karafuto) and the Kuriles, which Russia occupied after V-J Day, in accord with the pledge made to her by Britain and the United States at the Yalta conference.

Indicative of the delay in getting prisoners out of Russia, SCAP's report dated April 15 showed that at the end of the war there were 100,000 Japanese prisoners of war in Siberia and 704,848 in Southeast Asia.

Number Remaining
The number remaining in Southeast Asia on April 15 was only 73,734, while that in Siberia was 681,012. Also, the Russians have repatriated only a few thousand of the 372,016 Japanese prisoners of war who were caught in Saghalien and the Kuriles immediately after V-J Day.

Stressing the need for the return of war prisoners and an immediate peace treaty with Japan based on the principles of Christianity, an unimpeachable informant said: "Throughout history, when wars have been won, peace treaties have been signed and relations returned to normal. It is a Hitlerian concept to overrun and conquer a nation and keep its people enslaved. We need peace treaties now, and not Hitlerian control."

Barely two weeks after his arrival in Japan on September 17, 1945, General MacArthur asserted that the progress of the occupation permitted a "drastic cut in the number of troops originally estimated for that purpose," the informant pointed out.

Occupation Force
His estimate that within six months, the occupation force could probably number no more than 200,000 men, occasioned surprise in some quarters, but by the end of that period the progress of events made his earlier judgment seem reasonable to all. In the same statement of September 17, 1945, the Supreme Commander also indicated his view on the length of the military occupation.

Concluding his comment on the size of the occupation force, General MacArthur said: "The questions involved in this matter are entirely independent of the future Japanese political-governmental structure on a national and international plane. This problem is one of the ultimate solution of which necessarily awaits completion of the military phases of surrender. It is one which unquestionably will be treated upon the highest diplomatic level of the United Nations, and of which the answer cannot fail to be influenced by the incident of events in the near and approximate future." This was in 1945.

Recovery Of Japan
Again, early in February 1947, he expressed to visiting American editors his conviction that the ultimate job of implementing the democratization and recovery of Japan was a task for the United Nations. In his statement of February 20, 1947, addressed to Congress at the request of the War Department, General MacArthur urged early transition to civilian control to attain the best results for all concerned.

He said: "It must be, and remain, our firm purpose to restore peace and normalcy at the very earliest time practicable, and it is my full intention to recommend the removal of existing military controls over Japan as soon as civilian controls safely may be substituted. History pointed out the unmistakable lesson that military occupations serve their purpose at best only for a limited time."

General MacArthur's statement to Allied correspondents in Tokyo, that the military occupation was now becoming more of an obstacle than an aid to the economic reconstruction of Japan, was merely a summary of the views stressed by him since the beginning of the occupation.—United Press.
